5. TEACHING HISTORY AND ACADEMIC CAREER

My permanent academic career commenced in 1997 at the Academy of Economic Studies, Bucharest. Besides Business to Business Marketing I developed the subject Protection of Consumers, a topic that is to some extent taken for granted in developed market economies, but an essential issue for transition economies with no history of a formal market economy. There has been a strong need to change the behavior of all economic agents, whether consumers or producers, and this subject addresses these issues.

I next took over the subject Fundamentals of Commerce (National & International Approaches), and created a new interactive approach, relying on a partnership between Professor and students. The tutorials were altered from classroom experiences to simulating real micro-activity: students now form a virtual company, which is now the vehicle by which they learn the fundamentals of commerce

I developed the new subjects International Economic Transactions, Commercial Transactions, International Negotiation and Communication in Commercial Affairs, and Marketing Policy again addressing issues raised by the changes in our economy. The subjects were also needed to harmonize our instruction with European standards

My other teaching responsibilities included the postgraduate subjects Economics of Commerce and Tourism, Marketing of Tourism, Management of risk, Project Management and Design (both in English) Business Evaluation and Diagnosis and Financial and Commercial Techniques I also taught in both public and private universities, and consequently have experience of a wide range of approaches to education

My current subjects that I coordinate and supervise at the ASE are Economics of National and International Commerce (undergraduate level) and Management for Doing Business (English language). Starting with this year I will be teaching Smart Business at master and Systems of Business intelligence at doctoral level. I am also voluntarily developing a business club for/with students on Managerial Economics (trilingual) where I bring into our projects people from business area, diplomacy, research and academia so that we develop a new approach of life learning combining it with coaching.

The summer schools, the workshops, the business club and round tables are running using national and international research funds and our sponsors' support. All the events are widely disseminated by all means: websites, academic TV and economic Commerce Review. New course is starting with 2008-2009 at Master degree in a private university: Geo-Politics and Cultural Anthropology. New courses to be introduced and touched in 2009-2010 called Research Strategies (master level).
